(1) These investments were recapitalized after the development was complete. These returns represent the IRR's produced for investors exiting after the development phase.

(2) A portion of the investment was set aside for investors completing a 1031 exchange. Because their capital was invested later their IRR is higher than the initial investors.

(3) This property investment IRR was calculated with the inclusion of lender group investments and returns. These two lender groups produced IRRs of 18.97% and 8.04%, respectively.

(4) Initial investors recapitalized.

(5) Weighted average return and multiple are based on the aggregate of each individual property return as a percentage of the total sold portfolio equity. Simple average return and multiple are based on the straight average of each individual property return as a percentage of the total number of sold properties in the portfolio.
